Megan George is a Member of the firm in the Construction Service Group. She counsels clients throughout all phases of construction projects including planning, contract drafting and negotiation, and project administration. She routinely represents stakeholders in construction disputes, arbitration, and litigation.

The majority of Megan's practice focuses on representing developers, owners, and contractors in negotiating agreements related to the procurement, design, construction, and operation of hyperscale, enterprise, and colocation data centers across the United States. This includes project development, geotechnical, design, construction, commissioning, equipment, and other goods and services agreements for data centers and supporting infrastructure. She has experience in developing, negotiating, and managing contracts for leading companies in the data center industry, offering efficient and precise management of transactions annually exceeding $1 billion and 100MW of capacity.

Locally, Megan helps both public and private clients navigate state and federal procurement laws. Megan is also experienced in federal grant administration, offering clients an integrated approach to federally-funded public project delivery.
