Zac Losey is an attorney in the firm's Louisville office where he is a member of the Business Litigation Service Group. His practice focuses on representing people and companies in complex and high-stakes commercial disputes, including lawsuits involving breach of contract, unlawful business interference, non-compete agreements and other restrictive covenants, breach of fiduciary duty, trade secrets, fraud, and defamation.

His experience includes significant early stage victories in federal district court, obtaining temporary restraining orders to enforce non-compete agreements and prevent misappropriation of confidential information, and obtaining a $1.4 million jury verdict as assistant trial counsel in a case involving civil conspiracy and real estate fraud. Zac also has appellate experience in state and federal courts, including successfully defending an appeal in the Sixth Circuit that led to a published decision setting favorable precedent for the client.

Zac uses his experience to help clients successfully navigate commercial disagreements as efficiently and effectively as possible, so they can get back to focusing on their businesses: from dog trainers and solo startup entrepreneurs, to large and mid-size companies in a broad array of industries.

MORE THAN STITES & HARBISON

Zac joined the firm after serving as a law clerk to Hon. Karen K. Caldwell, United States District Court for the Eastern District of Kentucky and Chair of the Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation. While in law school, he assisted Professor Jonathan Shaub with research for a law review article on executive privilege published in the Duke Law Journal and Professor Joshua Douglas with an election law article published in the American University Law Review. Prior to law school, Zac was the legislative aide to Lexington City Councilmember Kathy Plomin, where he worked on an array of issues, including land use and zoning. Before that, he was as a brewer at Country Boy Brewing in Lexington, Kentucky, where he also assisted with legislative initiatives for the alcoholic beverage industry in the Kentucky General Assembly.

Outside of the office, Zac loves to spend time kayaking, hiking, playing softball, and working on his Ford Bronco.
